

South Street Bridge Closure

The City of Philadelphia's Streets Department officials have announced that on December 8, 2008, the South Street Bridge will be closed to all vehicular and pedestrian traffic.

The reconstruction of Philadelphia's South Street Bridge will have an impact on the day-to-day operations of commuting to and from University City during the City of Philadelphia's reconstruction of the Bridge.

The demolition and rebuilding of the bridge requires complete closure of the structure between Convention Avenue (Civic Center Blvd) and 27th Street, including the on-ramp and off-ramps connecting South Street and I-76.

Please be prepared for significant vehicular congestion throughout University City, as well as periodic traffic and parking changes for the duration of this 24-month project.

Individuals, who commute via SEPTA should visit the Philadelphia Reconstruction Website and click the SEPTA link for additional details.

As information about this project and its impact on the University City Community becomes available, it will post it on the <http://potholes.phila.gov/southstreetbridge> website or at <http://www.publicsafety.upenn.edu/ssbridge>.
